WHO SHOULD ATTEND

This program is intended for all family law lawyers.

Too often, lawyers struggle with concepts not taught in law school. This program aims to help lawyers maintain their sanity, health, and welfare.

PRESENTER: Robert G. Harvie QC | With more than 33 years of practice experience in litigation, mediation, collaborative law, and arbitration, Robert G. Harvie QC will use his insight and experience to provide a helpful framework regarding the organization of practice, client management, lawyer civility, and the value of volunteer work in the legal profession.

PRESENTER: John-Paul E. Boyd | Using the results of the Alberta Limited Legal Services Project as a springboard, John-Paul E. Boyd will explore the use of limited scope legal services in family law and clients' and lawyers' satisfaction with those services. John-Paul will discuss the potential of limited scope retainers in a family law practice to generate new sources of work with less stress.

PRESENTER: Maria Mitousis | In 2015, Maria Mitousis' life changed when a mail-bomb exploded in her Winnipeg family law office. Develop strategies for resilience in the face of trauma as she recounts her experience and what she has learned.

PRESENTER: Moya McAlister | Moya McAlister's work with the National Self-Represented Litigants Project has provided her great insight into the current access to justice crisis, especially in relation to self-represented litigants [SRLs]. Gain a better understanding and helpful advice on how to make your involvement with SRLs less stressful and more effective.

PRESENTER: Loraine Champion | Loraine Champion will share insight into dealing with stress, depression, mental illness, substance abuse, and resiliency through her experience as a practising lawyer, former Manager of the Law Society of Alberta's Early Intervention Programs, and current Executive Director of the Alberta Lawyers' Assistance Society.
